DIGITAL HISTORY PROJECTS

Peridot, Spring 2026 – present

<https://github.com/haleyrp1803/peridot-humanistic-data>

I developed Peridot as an open-source, open-access digital humanities tool for researchers to organize, explore, visualize, and present humanistic data. I made the tool by vibecoding with ChatGPT across over 150 hours of agent-assisted human labor.

Brown CDS: "How are AI Tools Useful (or Not) for Historical Research?" Spring - Summer 2026
My dissertation project was selected to collaborate with Brown's Center for Digital Scholarship to experiment with using LLMs for transcribing historical documents.

Traffic in Relics: Maria Maddalena d'Austria's Network and Collecting Practices, Fall 2023

<https://arcg.is/WifjW0>

A 25-page analysis Maria Maddalena von Habsburg's practices of collecting relics displayed in ArcGIS's StoryMaps, coupled with ClioVis timelines, maps, and other data visualizations. The essay investigates how Maria Maddalena levies her network to build her collection.

Multiplicity of Maritimities: Maritime History's terminology since Braudel, Spring 2023

<https://arcg.is/0H95Ku>

A 25-page analysis of Ocean History's development as a field since its foundation with Fernand Braudel. This essay uses a combination of visualization and historiographical analysis to trace the conversation around which term to use to define the field.

Mobile Artists: Giorgio Vasari, Michelangelo, and the Power Politics that Moved Them, Fall 2022

<https://arcg.is/1u5Ln8>

A 20-page analysis of Michelangelo and Vasari's mobility in Lives of Artists displayed in ArcGIS's StoryMaps, coupled with four ClioVis timelines and one map visualizing artist movement against a political backdrop.

Death and Taxes Video Game, Summer 2021

<https://www.utjapanlab.com/teachers> // <https://haleyrp1803.itch.io/death-and-taxes>

This short, text-based game explores the economic conditions of a low-ranking samurai in Tokugawa Japan. It was made as a teaching tool for Japanese history classrooms and doubles as a tutorial in making Twine and Bitsty games.
